Everything You Could Need to Know About Raising Chicks Most beginners start with already hatched chicks, but if you like to walk on the wild side, you can hatch your own! Hatching eggs are often considerably cheaper than purchasing day old chicks, but it comes with some risks. Regardless of if you choose to free range or coop your chickens, you'll need to feed them a high quality poultry feed. If you free range or pen range your flock, you'll need to just supplement their diet—they'll get a lot of their nutrition from the bugs and plants they pick out of the ground.
